From SXSW to BEA, BDC and IBC, Broadcaster has proven its place as a player in the industry.

CEO Sherrie Redding created the company in 2002 to help its partners get more out of their productions. This is evidenced by the products which have been released over the last several years – including Broadcaster’s VideoSuite, TrackBack, Blackboard, Trip and Broadcaster’s Broadcast University. “With the launch of these products, we have established ourselves as a player in the industry,” Redding said. Broadcaster has also been doing an excellent job of keeping up with technological advancements in the industry. Redding says, “We have a great product line, but we are also able to embrace and anticipate what technology will be in demand over the next few years.” Redding was recently honored with the Women of Influence Award by the Chicago Business Women’s Council. She has been the chief business and marketing officer of Broadcaster since 2003. In addition to her award, Redding was also honored with a Certificate of Appreciation by the 77a5ca646e
