Intellexer Summarizer is an innovative program for your computer that will create a short summary from any document or a browsed web page. You may read the summary instead of reading the whole document saving time for fun and leisure. The summary provides quick overview of the information presented in the original document, after reading them you will decide if the original document worth reading or just skip it. the summarizer program is a little program i designed to summarize what you are reading into a few words. it has a few add-on's that modify it's behaviour. its designed to summarize many texts together and to automatically extract the most important concepts in these summaries. it also can clean up the txt documents, in the end it will only show one sentence per line, still that is not perfect but i like it better then the standard text viewers. it has many options in order to modify it's behaviour.

you can change the font for every element, tag or sentence, the font size, text style, the order of the sentences, colors of the sentences, the color of the text, hyperlinks, other text elements, words you want to skip (not important, fat, short, etc) and more... it has a lot of features! it also has an index in which the words you want to skip are empty. you can also extract the text you want to skip into a txt file. but the most important feature is when it's not extracting a text, it will summarize what you are reading into a few words. this allows you to see what is important in the original text that isn't in the summary. it will combine and summarize all of the documents into one summary document. this is really cool. but it will need a lot of memory, CPU and Disk space. because it has to combine the summaries of all the documents into one. maybe you want to see another side of the story? you can click on a "All Elements" button and you will see all the sentences together. on my drive i got ~15MB of space for it, this is not enough. there is something else, let's see if you can find it. click on the history button and you will see all the versions of the document. it will be in this window, right next to the save button. you can click on each of them and they will change the summary. if you want to see an other document click on the history button again and select another document. if you want to see the
